Within the concept of social consciousness, several elements can be defined:

Introduction.

- It should contain its own attitude to the selected topic and highlighted in it the key idea.
- You can start an essay with a clear and precise definition of personal positions, i.e. Higher agreement or disagreement with the statement of the author of an aphorism.
- Further, it is appropriate to formulate an understanding of the statement that became the topic of the essay. It is important to define its main idea so that it becomes an obvious context that defines its content and essence.

Theses and arguments.

- They must reflect a personal position and be based on a scientific approach.
- The number of theses and arguments depends on the topic, inconsistency of statements, action plan, logic of thought development.
- The number of theses and arguments should be sufficient for persuasiveness, evidence of their opinion and the need to reprint the presentation made in the genre, where brevity and figurativeness are important.

Conclusion

- It is necessary to summarize the whole reasoning, to make generalized conclusions.

This was published by British Journal of Nursing in 2011 in a review of quantitative research paper "Patient Prognostic Evaluation: Pressure Uptake Prevention Mattress" by Linda Roughter. Criticism is "Balanced evaluation of criticism and research report" (Polit & Beck, 2010), which studies the pros and cons of this article and the importance and importance of this study for prevention of pressure ulcers (Burns & Grove, 2011). According to Burns and Grove (2011, p. 55), the abstract usually includes "research purpose, design, setting, number of samples, main results and conclusions." In this article, the author explained the equipment used and clearly analyzed the results. However, the authors did not mention the design and purpose of the research, and the location of the study. Parahoo and Reid said the recommendation should also be introduced in the summary (Ingham - Broomfield, 2008)
